How do we know what God wants us to do? Sometimes, the path is clear when the choices look like a “right” or “wrong” thing to do. Other times, when both options look right, it’s not so easy to know. How can you tell what God wants you to do? The key is to remember who God is.

In the Bible reading today, David describes God as patient, kind, honest, and merciful. David says, “I offer you my heart, Lord God, and I trust you” (Psalm 25:1-2a). God’s goodness and guidance are trusted. David reminds us that God guides us to good things. Just like David, when we are in need, we know that we can trust God.

So back to the question: which way do we go when two choices both seem right?

First, remember that God wants what is good for you.

Second, God puts people around us to help us, so talk to mentors and friends who care about you. Then pray before choosing.

Listen, pray, and know that God has good things planned for you.

Prayer

God, please help me make my choices today. Remind me that no matter where I feel led to go that you will always be with me. Amen.
