

SINFUL SATURDAY

One sin leads to another, and adventures quickly turn to nightmares. As always, little sins grow.

Let's Get Started

Episode Theme: Doing wrong brings consequences.

1. James 4:17 says that if you know the difference between right and wrong, and choose the wrong, it's sin. How can you tell the difference between right and wrong? Is it a feeling? Is it knowing God's word? Some of both?
2. Solomon was the king of Israel. When he was a brand-new king, he asked God for wisdom. God granted Solomon's request, and even today people still read Solomon's wise sayings in the biblical book of Proverbs. Solomon understood the influence that people have over us to choose the right or the wrong thing to do. He wrote, "He who walks with the wise grows wise, but a companion of fools suffers harm" (Proverbs 13:20). If you hang out with wise people, their good choices rub off on you—but if you hang out with fools, you'll get hurt. The Bible says a fool is an unteachable person who knows what's right and wrong but doesn't care. If you're anywhere near a fool when he chooses sin, you'll get hurt by his sin. As you listen to this episode, think about who is a good influence in your life, and who might be a "fool."

Memory Verse

"So whoever knows the right thing to do and fails to do it, for him it is sin"

James 4:17

After You Listen

In this episode, Liz and his friends choose to do things that they are know are wrong, and end up suffering the consequences.

Everyone makes mistakes. You break a toy or Mom's favorite vase. You forget to do your homework. You accidentally hurt your brother or sister while playing a game. Mistakes themselves aren't sins. But if you know before you do something that there's a better choice—even if that choice doesn't sound as fun—then doing it anyway is a sin.

If you think "someone could get hurt" or "I'll be in so much trouble" or "this isn't right" before you do something, these are clues that what you're thinking about doing is sinful. If you choose to do it anyway, you need to accept whatever happens as a result of your actions. It may mean a broken toy can't be repaired. It may mean being disciplined (like staying in your room, cleaning up the mess, or apologizing and paying for damage). One way to avoid the temptation to sin is to ask yourself what could happen as a result of your decision. Are you willing to pay that price?

Challenge

In this episode, Liz and his friends made bad choices because they were bored. Why not make a “Bored Box” for your house? Come up with ideas for out-of-the-ordinary things to do, write them down, and then keep them in a small box. Need ideas? Look around with your family and find a game or puzzle you haven’t used in ages. Look at toys or books that have been neglected on a shelf. Find a recipe you have always wanted to try. Challenge yourself to build something. Write a skit. Fill the “Bored Box” with possibilities. The next time you’re bored, reach into the box, take out an idea, do what it says! No peeking!

Take the Episode Quiz

Question 1: Who do Liz and Spike call when they’re bored?

Answer: Cole.

Question 2: What happens to Grandpa Anole’s car?
